

Sinclair Broadcasting's decision to force their stations to air an anti-Kerry documentary days before the election is a clear example of the dangers of media consolidation. Sinclair uses the public airwaves free of charge, and is obligated by law to serve the public interest. Forcing stations to air a program that reflects the personal political views of Sinclair's leadership days before the November 2004 election does not serve the public interest.